

Erin who went to the war with an Indiana regiment. He accompanied our scouting party out one day. The boys of the Seventieth Indiana told us to watch him, for he was a fool, and liable to involve our little troop in a complication of troubles.

"And the caution proved reasonable, though it was unheeded. Jim Cannon crept away from our party while we were searching the copse that skirted a neighboring hill, and in less than thirty minutes we heard a shot fired, followed after a short interval by thirty or forty in rapid succession. We hastened to the spot and picked up poor Jim. He was tattered. We actually counted eleven bullet holes in that fellow, and how do you suppose he explained it to us? He crept upon a party of ten or twelve bushwhackers eating a lunch in the shelter of a ravine, and thought he could capture the entire force. So he opened fire, at the same time yelling at the top of his voice, 'Surrender, ye spalpeen rebels!'"

"And he lived to tell you this story?"

"Lived why, he actually got well, and I learned recently that he now works in a northern Indiana town."—Chicago News.

Iron Extracted from Sea Sand.
It may not be generally known that sea sand contains from 5 to 7 per cent. of iron. Under ordinary conditions it would not pay, perhaps, to try to extract it, but a company now steps into the breach with electro machinery, so to speak, and claims that the iron can be extracted at a profit. The separator consists of a cylinder, whose surface is composed of electro magnets, revolving on the inside of an endless canvas belt. The sand is fed to the belt. A spray of water separates the particles, the iron being retained by the action of the powerful electro magnets and carried off on the belt to a receptacle at the other end.—New York Telegram.

The Tadpole.
Of course most people know that frogs and toads are evolved from tadpoles, but there are some very strange things about these batrachians which possibly you don't know. Because this changeling is so well known to nearly everybody it may be dismissed by saying that it is born with gills and lives entirely under water until it reaches the transformation period: then lungs appear in place of the gills, the tail drops off, legs sprout out, and an animal fitted to live on land is the result.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Not Very Plain.
Our Ottawa correspondent tells the story of a queer incident in the supreme court. Counsel for the appellant in a case the west had been for a good while in the court. Counsel for the respondent had been talking counsel, as is his wont. Apparently helping the timid leader out, when he started at something the lawyer said and asked, "Are you for the appellant?" "Yes, my lord." "Oh," said the judge bluntly, "I thought you were on the other side."—Toronto Globe.

"Him! Yes. You must have been very thoughtful. So I really gave you a receipt, did I? I must have forgotten it. Just look at the date of that receipt, will you, please?"

From the mysterious depths of her pocket the woman fished up a crinkled and folded paper which proved to be a money order payable at the Rockford postoffice. The purchaser had mistaken it for a receipt for the money which she paid the clerk.

The nature and value of the "receipt" were fully explained, and as its possessor left the building she bestowed upon the clerk a glare which was so chilly that it completely froze the money order window with frost.—Chicago Mail.

A Man Who Is Seldom Loved.
Some ill tempered men are loved not only beyond their deserts but beyond what one might think possible. Perhaps this is because they make up for their defects by an unusual warmth of affection; but there is one description of ill tempered man who is never liked, whether he receives a dutiful affection or not, and that is the man who always insists on having his own way. A passionate man is not always, perhaps not often, in a rage; a sulky fellow is not perpetually sulky, but an exacting man is continually irritating.

There are people who quietly, and perhaps good humoredly, but with fixed determination, insist that other people's preferences shall give way to theirs, and work it they are determined to do. These people are infinitely disagreeable. A man of this stamp may have many good qualities; he may be respected, but he cannot be loved. Not even his generous relations can avoid feeling a certain amount of dislike to his presence and a sense of relief when he is absent. The power of love may live through many hardships, but it cannot survive in an atmosphere of perpetual frost.—Chambers Journal.

An Old Story in a New Dress.
Two men met in Tombstone the other night who had not seen each other in fifteen years. When they had talked together for ten minutes they discovered that they had both been on a corner's jury in Montana, which, to say the least, was a remarkable one. The case was one of a man found drowned in the Yellowstone river; his body was brought to the coroner's rooms, the jury summoned and the body examined. In the hip pocket of his overalls was found a Colt's six shooter and in another pocket a $20 gold piece. The justice, who was also a coroner, as is also the rule in Arizona at the present time, fined the corpse $20 for carrying a concealed weapon, and then went on with the inquest.—Tombstone Prospector.

Appreciative of Her Sex.
Mrs. Wynne Finch asked of Mme. Mohl (French in every thing but birth) permission to bring a friend. "My dear," said Mme. Mohl, "if your friend is a man, bring him without thinking twice about it, but if she is a woman think well before you bring her, for of all the creatures God ever created none does spoil society like an English lady."—Gentleman's Magazine.

"How is your mother, this morning?"
"Very much better; she had a real restful sleep last night; she is almost rid of her night sweats, cough and nervousness, and is growing quite cheerful. How grateful we all are to you for that bottle of medicine!"
"Don't speak of gratitude. What does the doctor say?"
"He says he never saw so wonderful a change in such a serious lung trouble. He still thinks we are giving his medicine. I don't like to tell him."
"That's right. He's an old friend, you know. I'm sure your mother will get well now; but you won't forget the name of the medicine, will you?"
"Never! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a household word already, and it has come to stay. Do come and see what sunshine it has brought already, and let us thank you again for it."
